CHEERFUL CREDIT

Story and Direction
by
FRED HIBBARD

-----

Brownie's life consists of caring for his little pal, moving into wonderful "credit" apartments - and ousting the credit agent, when he comes to put his masters out into the street.

It all started when Brownie's mistress began getting restless in her present apartment and seeing an advertisement that gave her all the credit she wanted - she moved into a home that made a Fifth Avenue mansion look like a shanty. Thus Eddie, her faithful little husband found himself on the same par with the biggest hankers of his day.

However, Credit Companies stand even for a limited amount - and that amount had been reached by Bartine, the extravagant wife. So they sent some strong arm men to place them on the street. But Brownie - ever on the alert - saves them from this fate, but they soon learn that: "A chair in the home is worth four in the street."

"IT'S A CENTURY".
